

Top Hat Tales

Have the students put their name on a piece of paper and put all of them in the hat.

After the names are in the hat, the teacher (or the students) will pick out four names at a time. Each group of four students will work together to create a story about someone, or a team, losing their confidence. They'll need to talk about what happened in order to make them lose their confidence, what happened because they lost their confidence, and how they got it back.

Have them end their story with a comment that explains why having confidence is important.
