

This Jungle Jive book character can survive around 24 hours underwater!! They don't have lungs. They breathe through small holes found around their bodies, called 'spiracles'.

This Jungle Jive book character has a rudder-like tail. Their webbed hind-feet can propel them through the water up to 5 mph!

This Jungle Jive book character uses their fingers, toes, and tail to grasp objects, as well as steady themselves on limbs and branches. They love bananas, but many eat dirt too!!

This Jungle Jive book character's name originates from Latin language and it means "hundred legs". Despite its name, most possess less than a hundred legs. They usually have 15 to 30 pairs of legs.

This Jungle Jive book character relies strongly on their hearing and smell because of their poor eyesight. They communicate through a combination of grunts, snuffles, and squeals!!

This Jungle Jive book character has a long neck, but their legs are even longer. This makes their neck too short to reach the ground. As a result, they have to part their front legs or kneel down to get a drink of water.