

What's The Meaning?

This Lilly I speak of, it's time you should know,
Once lived as my eyelash, a long time ago.
Perched on my eyelid, she showed me the way,
To seek out the treasures that filled each new day.

This Lilly I speak of, it's time you should know,
Once lived as my eyelash a long time ago.
Perched on my eyelid, she showed me the way,
To seek out the treasures that filled each new day.

A precious young spirit you couldn't ignore,
She'd ask me to see, what I'd not seen before.
"You may have not noticed," she'd say with a smile,

"But the world spins around every once in a while."

A precious young spirit you couldn't ignore,
She'd ask me to see, what I'd not seen before.
"You may have not noticed," she'd say with a smile,
"But the world spins around every once in a while."

Above, you'll find two pages from The Toy Store. Read the words from each stanza. Then answer the questions to figure out what you think the author is trying to say.

Did you notice how that the two images work together? What do they create? _____

Why do you think the author had the illustrator do that? _____

What kind of treasures is she talking about in the first stanza? _____

What do you think "You may have not noticed, but the world spins around every once in a while" means?
(Hint: Look at the newspaper. Get out the book and have someone read the first article on it.)
